MR, AND MRS. BRADLEY MARTIN'S SUPERB ENTERTAINMENT.

The great social feature of last night, one which had been talked of for weeks, was the cotilion dinne given by Mr. and Mrs. Bradley Martin at Delmonico's The entire upper part of the establishment was put to use, the dinner being served in the ballroom. frequenters of this famous place found much to aston ish and surprise them, as their host and hostess had put forth every endeavor to make the ballroom look like a private house. The lobbies were hung with old Beanvais and Gobelin tapestries, while suits of armor and implements of ancient warfare were hung on the walls, as well as old portraits and paintings Martin's own collection. Two massive candelabra of bronze were placed near the entrance to the ballroom, while palms and plants in bloom were placed in every available space. Old clocks, cabinets and bits of bric-a-brac were added, making a wonderful chance. Mr. and Mrs. Martin received their guests in the red room, which was made to look like led drawing-room of an old French mansion. Cabinets held rare pieces of Sevres and collections of fans, while antique furniture gave an air of comfort.

The decoration of the ballroom was most elaborate.

The walls were entirely covered for the occasion with panels of pale-blue brocade of a Louis XVIth pattern. and on these panels, between the large mirrors, were hing veritable Louis XVIII sconces of heavily gilded bronze. From each sconce hung a basket of lilles-of-the-valley and over the mirrors were garlanded roses of different kinds. There hung from the centre of the ceiling a large chandelier of electric-lights, completely covered with Japanese asparagus and orchids. ove which was a large cluster of white Blacs. The window ledges were massed with pink roses. were six long tables extending across the ballroom at right angles with Fifth ave., and at each table were vers for forty-six guests. The massive candelabra had pink shades and at intervals were placed gilded baskets fied with broad pink ribbons and filled with Glore de Paris roses. In the room on the Broadway side of the ballroom was Lander with an orchestra of forty-five men picked from the Philharmonic Society. who gave a concert during the serving of the dinner.

The invitations said dinner at 8 o'clock, but it was nounced that it was ready, and while the guests were finding their places the march from Gounod's "Queen of Sheba" was played. Mr. Martin led the way with Leys s. William Astor, while August Belmont took in Mrs. The host sat at the head of a table at one end of the room, while Mrs. Martin was at the last table. One of the tables was reserved for the debutantes and belies of the last two or three seasons, who were taken in by the young men of the dancing set.

The gowns and jewels were magnificent-Martin wore a gown of ruby velvet trimmed with sable fur, her diamond tiara and stomacher and a necklace of rubles and diamonds.

The serving of dinner took nearly two hours, and then all the guests returned to the drawing rooms for coffee and liqueurs, while the tables were being re moved from the ballroom for the cotillon. lowed about an hour later, George H. "THE GONDOLIERS" NEW VOYAGE.

A REORGANIZED COMPANY TO SING THE OPERA AT PALMER'S THEATRE.

Ever since D'Oyly Carte arrived in New-York, two weeks ago, he has been, with his wife, attending the performances of "The Gondollers" at the New Park Theatre considering what plans should be adopted to improve the representation of the opera, and making Tribune reporter, and Mr. Carte repeated at the very start what he said on the day that he came to New-York, that he never had any intention of sending out a cheap company. With this understanding he said that on the first night when he visited the Park Theatre he had found the performance better than he had be expect, though he had no doubt that it was bad on the opening night, and worse on the second. Some of the members of the company were sick at that time and the rest were nervous and excited, and the result was a presentation of the operawhich was criticised severely, and no doubt with justice. After seeing the opera, Mr. and Mrs. Carte ilted with Mr. Palmer, and Mr. Carte declared that he would do anything in his power and would spend any amount of money, even £10,000, if necessary, to place the piece before the people of New-York in such a way as they should approve.

As to the plans for accomplishing this, Mr. Carte | those pledges made? spoke as follows: "We shall open at Palmer's Theatre on February 17, with practically a new cast. Probably two or three of the present cast will remain, but cannot now Richard Temple, who is great favorite in London, and he will probably be the Second Gondoller, but he may be the Duke. Lawn tennis players from all parts of the country were gathered at the Hoffman House last night. Among them were Howard Taylor, Richard D. Lewis Henry W. Slocum and Vallentine G. Hall. It was the annual meeting of the National Lawn Tennis A sociation, and seventy-five clubs were represented. The president, Joseph Charie, was re cleated for the coming year, as were all of last year's officers. It was decided to hold the championship contest for singles at New port, and doubles at Staten Island. There was a vigorous debate as to whether staten Island or Berkeley twal should have the singles. The dates of the contests are to be fixed by the executive committee.

ONE RUNAWAY SENATOR CAUGHT.

Helena, Mont., Feb. 7 (Special).—The efforts of Lieutenant-Governor Richards to prevent Democratic Senators from leaving the state resulted in the arrest of Senator Becker at Glendive by the sheriff. A writ of habeas corpus was served at Miles City and tained by Judge Milburn, Democrat. The intention was to spirit Becker away, but an error in the papers caused delay and an officer from Helena with the state warrant arrived in time to take the Senator in custody. He will be arraigned before the bar of the Senate to morrow.

THE WORLD'S FAIR.

A REASONABLE INQUIRY FROM A UNITED STATES SENATOR.

To the Editor of The Tribune. Sir: I have believed that a World's Fair could not be successfully held elsewhere than in New-York City, and have had no doubt that such would be the decision of Congress. But this is the present situation; Congress, in both branches, the President, and the New-York Legislature are Republican. Tammany Democrats rule New-York arrangements as rapidly as possible to put the plans in Republican. Tammany Democrats rule New York execution. Mr. and Mrs. Carte have done all their City. Mr. Depew came to Washington, and by work quietly, and yesterday they were ready for the request of Mayor Grant and all the New-York first time to announce the general result of their de Democrats, who desired the fair for New-York at every turn of conversation in the national liberations. They told their plans last night to a City, volunteered to the Senate Committee this

By request of Mayor Grant, chairman, Mr.

Warner Miller also made this statement: New-York proposes to manage this Exposition through a commission of 103 men. How that body of men are divided politically was told you this morning. I need not repeat it.

Now, I wish to ask: In fact and in truth are sixty of the present corporators Republicans? Upon the suggestion that they are not, an effort is being made at Albany to make Mr. Depew's and Mr. Miller's pledges clearly good. This effort is denounced as partisan. If it is partisan, why were situation. The Emperor, by repudiating the bargain which he virtually made with the revolutionary leaders, has merely impoverished himself for the sake of maintaining his dignity. The Provisional Government, upon receiving information of that act of repudiation, acted promptly and decisively. The decree granting him $2,500,000 was immediately annulled. If this seemed a harsh and summary reprisal, it was a necessary act. It was not a time for indecision and compromise measures. The Government must show no signs of weakness and vacillation. The decree was a final and irreversible act of repudiation of the Empire. It was an official notification in the first land interests here, and considerably more than one-half of the Brazilian debt is held in England. Their money is useful and perhaps necessary here, but they are not liked any the better on that account. Their true policy would involve immediate and hearty recognition of the revolutions and of the utter impracticability of a return to monarchical institutions. American residents, I am glad to be able to add, have taken an opposite course. They have cordially approved of the Provisional Government. W. P. Tisdel, of Washington, who has been up and down South America, and knows Brazil as few Europeans do, represents the best class of American opinion. He expresses the opinion, without reserve, that Republican institutions will open a new and progressive era in literation on the conduct of the Provisional Government must show no signs of weakness and vacillation. A CULEAN SWIEP. The Provisional Government has done its work of broad lines and has acted with as much practical wisdom as boldness. It has cleared the ground by levelling nearly all the political institutions of the country. This was wise because the conditions of monarchical and republican governments are incompatible. It abolished the Na ments are incompatible. It amulated like National and Provincial Legislatures and transferred the administration of the States to Provisional Governments. It swept away the manacipal administration of Ria—an incompetent and corrupt body that could never have been reformed. The ground has been cleared and the conditions for a new political order have been created. All who can read and write are armed with the franchise—a wise compromise under the conditions of dense ignorance prevailing here. All foreigners who were in Brazil on the day of the revolution are invested with citizenship. This is, perhaps, too sweeping a measure, since foreigners who prefer to retain citizenship in their own countries are subjected to the inconvenience and annoyance of declaring their purpose before local tribunals—but the main object was meritorious—that of reinforcing the intelligent voting papulation. Civil marriage was a salutary and greatly needed reform. French writers, instigated by priests and monarchists, are hereely assailing the Government on this ground, and to the disgraye of our own American States the prevalence of divorce there is the staple argument employed by them. They exaggerate the facts and missipply the logic but it ought to be a fresh incentive to action on the part of divorce reformers in the United States that the enemies of republican in statations here are using this argument.

In all these respects the new Government has noted with firmness, decision and consummate ability. tional and Provincial Legislatures and transferred

In all these respects the new Government has neted with firmness, decision and consummate ability.

Only two fundamental conditions are still undetermined: (1) The relations of States and the Notional Government; and (2) the relations of Church and State. On the decision of the Ministers in these two essential matters hang momentous consequences. An important step toward determining the relations of State and National Governments has been the appointment of a very able and representative commission to frame a new Constitution. This will be promulframe a new Constitution. This will be promiting ated before the elections and the constituencies virtually called upon to sanction either a National charter similar to that of Venezuela or one corresponding to those of the United States, the Argentine Republic and Chili. The relations of Church and State are temporarily undetermined. The Ministers prepared a decree abolishing the present State Church, but President Fonseca has hesitated before signing it. The subject is one too large to be discussed in this letter, but its importance is overwhelming.

FOREIGN OPINION.

The English residents here are hestile to the new institutions and loud in their criticisms of the Provisional Government. This is perhaps a natural tendency, but unless it be repressed it will materially diminish their prestige and influence here. They have enormous commercial and financial interests here, and considerably

The Provisional Government has made, perhaps, some mistakes, as was inevitable in so mamentous a crisis; but these have not been serious, and are insignificant in comparison with the wise and patriotic acts by which the new institutions have been established on broad and stable foundations. In judging of its decrees and policy, one peeds to hear in mind two essential facts: (1) The ommercial supremacy of Euro
